• Artist

Lim Sunhee earned a bachelor's (1999) in Western painting, a master's degree (2002) in Western painting and printmaking at Ewha Woman University and a doctor's degree (2014) in Western painting at the same university. She currently lives and works in Seoul. The artist has been working with media and painting both for about 10 years since the mid-2000s and has since switched to a painter in 2015. Seonhee Lim's paintings are not merely represented detailed description, but rather explored the flatness that reveals the properties of the medium itself. By contrasting formative elements such as points, lines, planes, colors, and forms with detailed descriptions, she tries to show the painting as a medium as well as the concept of flatness.

• Explanation

This work is in which pink and blue are the main colors, and then layers are stacked with a gradual change of pink (light pink-pink-slight pink-dark pink-red-blue). By expressing the formative elements composing the screen through layers without concentrating on the form, we tried to create a painting with an open structure and painting as an organic relationship. Since the pink layer covering the entire background of the work contains the objects expressed in pink on canvas, each object is relatively flat, and only the brush strokes of different thicknesses and the density of colors are the only objects on the canvas. As a result, each image has a divided shape, but since they are expressed only with color layers, they have an organic relationship without constraining each other's shape.
